

Title:

Anti-doping policy and the development of doping in the Czech Republic.

Points of thesis:

The points of thesis is to predict future developments in the fight against doping and design more effective and consistent fight against doping in sport based on the complete analysis of the anti-doping policy around the world, as well as in the Czech republic and analysis of development in doping in the Czech republic from 2000 to present. I chose this period because I consider the data obtained in this period to be sufficiently significant and relevant. At the same time, this time horizon is sufficient to establish a trend in the modern development of doping in the Czech Republic. Objectives of the thesis will be achieved by compliance with sub-tasks, which include:

- Identification and characterization of the concepts relating to the topic: doping, the institutional form of anti-doping policy, legislative form of anti-doping policy, prohibited substances and doping methods.
- Selection of appropriate methods for gathering information, data and documents for subsequent analysis
- Analysis of the anti-doping policy and development of doping in the Czech republic
- Presentation of proposals and recommendations to improve and streamline the fight against doping in the Czech republic

Methods:

To achieve the objectives of the work author applied the interview, descriptive analysis, development studies and analysis of documents.

Results:

Results of the work highlight the form of an anti-doping policy, its main principles and trends in the interaction with the development of doping itself. The findings are used to determine possible future development of anti-doping policy and the development of doping in the Czech Republic.

Key words:

doping, anti-doping policy, WADA, World Anti-Doping Code, Czech Anti-Doping Committee